

HE HELPED 2,000 SLAVES REACH FREEDOM

NOW THEY'RE TEARING DOWN HIS HOUSE

THE FUSSELL HOUSE, built in 1823 and located in Kennett Square was an important stop on the Underground Railroad. 2,000 runaway slaves were helped to freedom by Quaker physician and anti-slavery activist, Dr. Bartholomew Fussell and his wife Lydia. Tragically, this historic home has been left to decay (see left) and is now threatened with demolition. It should be preserved as a historic landmark. Help save our history before it's too late!
